

Appendix 2. Statistical considerations

Nadežda A. Gavriluk

All types of find categories characteristic for ancient cities of the northern Black Sea coast are represented among the archaeological material of Sector NGS. In the following the results of a statistical processing of the finds from the sector are presented. The analysis is concerned with the finds of the pre-Roman periods only.

Pottery prevails among the finds. About 28% of finds are connected with building activity (primarily roof tiles). Only a very low number, 0.03%, represents architectural details.

Statistical processing of the Find Lists allows comparison between structures and allows us to speak about general tendencies in the development of the material culture. In order to simplify the processing, a package of computer programs, "Settlement", was developed. The package was used for primary processing of the data files on pottery. The results of the analysis have allowed us to draw comparisons not only between the structures of Sector NGS, but also to compare the various functional groups of pottery.

By addressing the finds of each location by the application of the same criteria the results can be compared not only within the limits of individual structures (for example, the definition of the functional purpose of a room),¹³¹⁹ but also within the limits of a group of structures or features.
